Why rezoning the above locations from single homes to high density could create fire escape issues.

If the rezoning on Poinsettia goes through and we have an additional 486 units added I see the traffic on Poinsettia looking like 5 during rush hour. Most of those units will have two cars giving us an additional 972 cars on Poinsettia each day.

I have lived off of Poinsettia for 35 years and have been through MANY wild fires and evacuations off of Poinsettia when you could see the red blaze coming down the street with Poinsettia loaded cars rushing to escape. Other cars trying to go east to get to their homes and save their animals and items from their homes. While fire fighters trying to fight the traffic and get to the blazes. If you haven't been through it you cannot imagine it.

I shutter to think of the additional 486 units and the families that would be in harms way.

I do hope the powers that be, will reconsider the rezoning to avoid a fire disasters in the future.
